Intended cooperation plan for uninterrupted power supply for comm

just as nature intended

I find just as nature intended an odd phrase to use. What has a computer program (app) got to do with nature? (cross-posted) Perhaps it means which is only natural.

Intended probably only works if it's obvious who's doing the intending. But it's unreasonable, in my view, to expect us to comment on a whole list of possible combinations of

Reliability and Economic Assessment of Integrated Distributed Hybrid

This study evaluates the reliability and economic aspects of three hybrid system configurations aimed at providing an uninterrupted power supply to base transceiver stations (BTS)

deliberate/intended/intentional/planned

Here's a new question, loosely related to this thread I do ask many questions to this friend regarding a subject he does not want to talk a lot about, but it's on purpose to make him react and

intend, intent, intended , WordReference Forums

Your sentences above are correct, but intent in terms of being intent on doing something is not the same word as "intent," a noun, meaning something that is intended. I cannot think of any

Intended for using or Intended for use

No. That won't work. After "intended for" you need a noun, not a gerund. Here "use" is a noun. and intended for use in calculators. The writer could also have written: and intended to be

Improving energy resilience in cellular base stations and critical

This article comprehensively analyzes each dimension, identifies existing research gaps, and proposes an integrated energy-routing and control structure that ensures uninterrupted operation

Multi-objective cooperative optimization of communication base station

We were not intended / we didn't intend

The first one is passive, you were not intended to do something by someone (or some authority) that is not named. It implies that what you did was forbidden in some way. Does that make

Uninterrupted Communication: Complete Backup Power Solutions for

Our solutions ensure uninterrupted communication and reliable network operation- even when the grid goes dark.

A multi-BS cooperation self-optimising sleep strategy for 5G BSs that consists of an initial user association stage based on multi-BS cooperation (MBSC) and a self-optimising variable

Communication base station power supply intention cooperation plan

Our study introduces a communications and power coordination planning (CPCP) model that encompasses both distributed energy resources and base stations to improve communication quality

Algorithms for uninterrupted power supply to mobile communication

In this article, an algorithm for automatic control of energy sources was developed to improve the uninterrupted power supply of mobile communication base stations. Based on the proposed

Power Supply Project For Communication Base Stations

This article will explore in detail how to secure backup power for telecom base stations, discussing the components involved, advanced technologies, best practices, and future trends to ensure continuous
